> Who We Are

We are an African Institute of higher learning offering specialised programmes in health and social justice. We provide an intergrated Africentric and interdisciplinary approach to teaching, learning and research. Our graduates are multidisciplinary professionals who champion social justice and transform health systems.

We foster a learning environment where critical thinking, innovation, and evidence-based solutions take precedence. Our curricula are designed to reflect Africa's diverse health systems, policy frameworks and socio-economic realities, enabling students to develop expertise that is locally relevant and globally informed.

Our flagship programmes, The Bachelor of Sexual and Reproductive Health and the Postgraduate Diploma in Sexual and Reproductive Health are accredited by the National Council for Higher Education. We are also expanding our academic offerings in community health, global health, public health, digital health, and health services delivery (Nursing, Midwifery, Pharmacy, Clinical Medicine, Medical Laboratory Science, and Medical Education). Beyond these academic programmes, we offer short courses, certificate programmes, and customised training in health and social justice.

- We nurture multidisciplinary professionals who are grounded in the theory and practice of health and social justice, committed to ethical practice, and the advancement of Africentric solutions. Our graduates emerge with a deep understanding of the intersections between health and social justice, applying their expertise to strengthen institutions, shape policy, and contribute to equitable health outcomes in Africa.
